October 31, 2015 - October 30, 2016

30 Americans: Moderated Panel on Racism

Kenny Coble @KennyCoble · 20 Oct 2016

Harold Moss, talk all day. Please talk all day. We will listen.

On an evening highlighting the pain and the beauty of the black experience, it's very honoring of the mayor to mention Asian pain too.

Mayor Strickland is calling out Tacoma's own history of racism—naming the horrors we've committed against the Chinese and Japanese.

There is history on this @TacomaArtMuseum panel. Harold Moss is here—Tacoma's first black mayor, an icon.
